Fair Play.

It is being whispered around that considerable criticism is being leveled against the executive officers of the Red Cross Association. Without attempting to dissect the reported criticisms, and without taking active part in either supporting or refuting the charges formulated, we would like to give the viewpoint of the outsider upon the conduct of the Association in Crossfield.

From the frequent notices that appear in our columns it would seem that the Red Cross officers have in no way been guilty of resting on their oars. We presume that the work of the executive is to provide material for willing workers and to always have that material on hand. To the outsider it certainly looks as though this part of the executive duties has been faithfully attended to.

Two months ago a very successful concert was held in Crossfield in the interests of the Association. The results of this concert were a credit to those who organized it. Cash donations have, we believe, been made for various purposes; and, as these affairs do not run themselves, the credit of having money on hand when needed should go to those who control the organization.

To the casual observer it would appear that praise rather than blame should be the lot of the Red Cross Executive and that there should be sincere regret at the announced resignation of two of the executive officers. We would remind our readers that criticism is always easier than execution, and it frequently transpires that the critics are those who are least entitled to criticize. We know that the officers of the Red Cross Association have spent much time and labour in the furtherance of the cause they are upholding. Can the faultfinders say as much? or will these stories prove as unwarranted and as ungenerous as the canard which was circulated last fall, to the effect that our delegates to the Patriotic Fund Central Committee had their expenses paid from the monies subscribed.

Local and General

How about the best rural fair in Alberta now? We're away at the pistol and the rest won't catch up. Congratulations to those responsible and many thanks.

If you are thirsty what is the difference between a glass of whisky and soda and a lemonade? Five cents! Why not save it and your stomach at the same time.

Mr. Morrow will address two meetings at Airdrie on Sunday, in the interests of Prohibition.

The Rodney district Picnic will take place on Wednesday, July 14, on section seven, Rosebud coulee. Ladies bring baskets. Everybody come and have a good time.

Mr. Chas. A. Wilson from St. Catharines, Ont., is on a visit to his old friend Col. Carlisle, at the Circle N Ranch.

The Rodney Sunday School was re-organised on Sunday last, and will meet each Sunday at 11 a.m.

Oh, yes! A Big Dance, where? Why, at Wise's New Barn, on Friday, July 16th.

Ladies to provide lunch. Everybody welcome.

Found, near the Fire Hall, Crossfield, on Tuesday, July 6th, a Fountain Pen. Owner can have same by applying at the Chronicle office and paying for advt.

The W.A. will meet at the home of Mrs. Scholesfield, on the afternoon of Thursday, July 22nd, at 2 o'clock, instead of on Thursday, July 15, as arranged at the meeting.

The Elucationary Contest in the Union Church on Tuesday evening next promises to be an exceedingly interesting event. The competitors come from Inverlea, Sunshine, Tany-Bryn and Rodney. A Silver medal will be given to the successful competitor. There will be special music. No admission fee, but a collection will be taken.

In the latest issue of the Alberta Gazette we notice that Leslie Farr, of Airdrie, and William Urquhart, of Crossfield, have been appointed Stock Inspectors for their respective districts. These appointments will be of great benefit to farmers and others shipping cattle, and will be a means of saving valuable time over the former method.

In a recent issue, through the kindness of Mrs. Boyle, we were able to publish two letters which were sent to her from the front concerning her late husband Col. Boyle. His noble deeds and also his lamentable death. Probably there are others of our readers who may have relations or friends serving the Empire, from whom they have received some message.

We should be pleased to publish any such letters. The greatest care will be taken of any letters that may be entrusted to us for publication, and they will be promptly returned. Names will be omitted if desired.

The Rev. Dr. Lloyd, Principal of Emmanuel College (Anglican) Saskatoon, will speak on Friday evening, July 9th, in the L.O.O.F. Hall, on the proposed Liquor Act. Archdeacon Lloyd served as a private in the rebellion of '85 and distinguished himself at the battle of Cut Knife Creek. He held the Indians at bay although he had only one cartridge left in his magazine. He was the chaplain of the All-British Colony which formed Lloydminster. He has been much interested in the cause of temperance reform, and was elected President of the Social and Moral Reform League of Sask., and is now President of the Dominion Alliance. Crossfield should do itself honour by giving the distinguished Principal an enthusiastic reception.

Baseball.

Some poet has written,
Oh, some horrible stuff,
About a good ball team;
But then it's all bluff.
Now Floral was in it
About a year before last,
But as for a show down
You'll see they're not fast.

A good team from the North,
Sometimes wander this way,
Then Floral's not in it
Any time of the day.

When Casey is pitching
Every batter strikes out.
If he lets them hit it
The rest put him out.

Now that's a good ball team,
And although they're not stars,
They get Floral's nanny,
Who runs for their cars.

This rhyme is a jumble,
But I'll have you to know,
Before I'm through talking,
Tan-y-Bryn isn't slow.

So when Floral's ready,
And done up the chores,
Why, let's have a ball game,
There'll be no encore.

And then when it's over
You'll see, Floral's all in,
While rooters keep yelling
Through horns made of tin.

They will wander away,
To look after the chicks.
I've looked at the score book,
It says fourteen to six.

WAKE UP, CANADA!

New Toronto Board of Trade is Promoting Prosperity in Canada

The Toronto Board of Trade recently issued a neat pamphlet under the title, "Wake Up, Canada—A Method to Keep Business as Usual." This booklet contains official statistics of the imports of foreign goods to Canada during the last fiscal year. Apart from the statistics, however, the booklet contains some sound advice for Canadians generally, a few paragraphs of which we reproduce: Thousands of people in Canada are out of work. If the men and women of this country would buy Canadian-made goods exclusively, Canada would be millions of dollars richer, and all workmen would be back at work. Charity begins at home, and this is not only charity but good business. Let every citizen—man and woman—show true patriotism by promptly resolving to make Canada strong and prosperous by providing work for her sons and daughters.

This can be done, in large part, by the development of every possible Canadian resource, and particularly by demanding Canadian-made products and Canadian-made goods in the course of our daily life.

Buyers all over Canada can do much to check the incoming flood of foreign-made goods. Now is the time to remember that every dollar saved to Canada is a dollar earned for Canada.

Every manufacturer and merchant should lay down this policy for his purchasing department to-day. This is his first duty in the matter.

Architects, builders and contractors can, if they will, keep thousands of Canadian workmen employed by specifying Canadian-made materials in their building specifications.

Other professional men can add to their own incomes by ensuring the prosperity of their clients through purchase of home products.

Government and municipal authorities all over Canada have it in their hands to divert a tremendous volume of business to Canadian factories, and surely it is wise as well as patriotic to give our own workmen the employment so that they will not become in any way a charge upon the community.

The demand to-morrow all over Canada for Canadian-made goods would change, as if by magic, the present depression into immediate prosperity.

Here, then, is a ready-at-hand, practical, sensible, and profitable way for us, all of us, to make and keep Canada prosperous.

The Mystery of the Ravenspurs

By Fred M. White

Lard, Luck & Co. Limited
London, Melbourne and Toronto

He had dropped the match he was about to apply to his cigarette and was staring out of the window. The blind had not been drawn; the panes were framed with flowers.

And inside that dark circle there came a face, a dark, earnest face, with avul eyes, filled with agony and rage and pain. Across the busy forehead was a cut from which blood streamed freely.

"You are not listening to me," Mrs. May cried. "What is the matter?"

The face, a mere at the window. Geoffrey gasped. "A horrible looking man, not of this country at all, a man with a gash in his forehead. He seemed to be looking for something. When he caught sight of me he disappeared."

Mrs. May had risen and crossed to the long French window opening on to the lawn. Her face was towards Geoffrey and she seemed determined, or so he imagined, to keep her face concealed from him.

"Strangers," she said, carelessly, though she was staring at him. "Surely you were mistaken. Some trick of the brain, a frisk of imagination."

Geoffrey laughed. Young men at his time of life, men who follow healthy pursuits, are not given to tricks of the imagination. His pulse was beating steadily; his skin was moist and cool.

"I am certain of it," he said. "What is that noise?"

Something was calling down the garden. Long before this time the good people of the farm had gone to bed.

"Shall I go and see what it is?" Geoffrey asked.

"No, no," Mrs. May whispered. "Stay here, I implore you. I would not have had this happen for anything. What am I saying?"

She passed her hand across her face and laughed slightly.

"There are secrets in everybody's life and there are no mines without secrets. Stay till I return. There will be no danger for me, I assure you."

She stepped out into the darkness and was gone. Geoffrey stood and bent over a dark blot and two that lay on the stone sill at the bottom of the window.

"Blood," he muttered, "blood beyond a doubt. It was no delusion of mine." From outside came the wail of siren drapery. It was Mrs. May returning. She seemed herself again this time.

"The danger is past," she said, "if danger you choose to call it. The next time we meet we shall laugh together over this comedy. I assure you it is a comedy. And now I am going to ask you to leave me."

This woman was playing a part and playing it extremely well. With less innate knowledge of the plot she would have been thoroughly deceived. As it was he was affected to make light of the matter. He held out his hand with a smile.

"I am glad of that," he said. "You must let me know when, perhaps, you may be disposed to allow me to assist you. Good-night, and thank you for one of the pleasantest evenings of my life."

The door closed behind Geoffrey and he stumbled along in the darkness until his eyes became accustomed to the gloom. Out in the road some one crept up to him and laid a hand on his arm. Like a flash Geoffrey had him by the throat.

"Speak or I will kill you," he whispered. "Who are you?"

"Come with me at once," came the hoarse reply. "And release that grip of my throat. I am Sergius Tchigor-sky."

CHAPTER XXI. The Mystery Deepens

Geoffrey recognized the deep rasping tones of Tchigor-sky directly. His hand dropped to his side and he used to tell him that danger was in the air. It was the thick, still kind of night that goes with certain people who understand the game. It is no use to work in this deadly mysterious fashion as long as certain people can read the danger signals and act upon them, and therefore it has been decided to fall back upon more violent methods. You are not afraid of danger?"

"Not in the least," replied Geoffrey.

"The danger is great. You are dealing with some of the cleverest people on earth. If you are discovered you will be put away. Your courage will be tested to the utmost. Are you ready?"

Geoffrey hesitated but for a moment. His senses seemed to be braced and strengthened. He seemed to hear better all at once; his eyes penetrated farther into the gloom. There was a feeling of eagerness, of exultation upon him. He took Tchigor-sky's lead and said, "I am ready."

"Feel that," he said. "Is not my pulse steady? I am longing to go forward. Only give me a chance to find the truth."

Tchigor-sky chuckled. This was the kind of grit he admired.

"You will do," he said. "And you will go alone on your expedition. You are acquainted with all the vaults and passages of the castle by this time; every inch of the ground is known to you. Give me your coat and shoes."

Geoffrey handed them over, getting a pair of rubber-soled shoes and a rough pea jacket in exchange. In the emergency of the latter he found a revolver.

"Now what am I to do?" he demanded.

"Stand here," Tchigor-sky explained. "Presently you will see a figure or two. Do not move. You must understand what they are saying, but that makes no difference. You are to follow them. It is not a matter of happens by down you can afford to follow them. It is a matter of happens by down you can afford to follow them. It is a matter of happens by down you can afford to follow them."

Geoffrey stood there, his hand on his hip, waiting for the next move.

Half an hour passed and still no sign. Had the affair miscarried and the micrometers got away in the wrong direction? Strain his ears as he would, Geoffrey could hear nothing.

Then, at length something soft and rustling seemed to be creeping along on the lawn on the other side of the hedge.

Geoffrey crept through the gap in the garden fence and immediately dropped on his face, for somebody carrying a lantern was softly creeping in the direction of the house.

He saw a woman, a woman who had a black lace shawl wrapped about her that in the moonlight it was impossible to make out her features. She paused and made a hissing sound between her teeth.

As if they had been evolved out of Geoffrey's innermost thoughts, there appeared two men upon the lawn. One was lying on his back, his head upon the ground, his hands clasped over his eyes. They were Indian natives of some kind, but of what race precisely Geoffrey did not know.

He was looking through the window. A craggy, ugly, sinister face it was, but the face of a man, a man's face, a man's face.

to unaccustomed feet even in the broad daylight. But the man seemed to know the way perfectly and the woman followed without hesitating. They came presently to the iron sand, fringed by the ebbing tide.

Then they turned to the right, pausing at length before a solid-looking expanse of cliff that stood right under Ravenspur Castle at the moment they loomed darkly against the brown rocks, the next minute they seemed to be swallowed up by the cliffs. They had entered the mouth of a cave.

Geoffrey followed still more cautiously. On and on they went, until at length they paused. Then the light from the lantern grew stronger. From behind a ledge of seaweed-dirt granite Geoffrey watched them furtively. They were waiting for something—a signal, probably—before going farther.

The signal seemed to come at last, from where it was impossible for Geoffrey to judge, and then the advance was resumed. Presently they entered into the subterranean level vault under the castle, where Geoffrey had seen Marion walking in her

Mrs. May turned to her companion and gave him some sharp commands. He had lost all her love and Geoffrey could see that her dark eyes were glowing with a strange, morbid, and his hand upon the lantern.

The next instant the place was plunged into pitch darkness. Five or six minutes passed, and nothing was heard but the lap of the ebbing tide on the shore. Then a hand was gently laid on Geoffrey's arm.

Conditions Necessary to Ensure Success in the Poultry Business

To produce poultry that will meet the present day high standard of quality requires business-like attention to the essential things that tend to influence the proper growth and keep the flock in such condition as to keep production practically constant throughout the whole year.

That great success can be attained in small flocks on comparatively small spaces has been repeatedly demonstrated.

Of course, there are a number of very essential considerations that may make or mar success, but we believe failure is due in more cases to neglect to avoid difficulties than by lack of attention to furnish what may be generally termed a few essentials.

The poultryman who raises birds to show wants to produce something that will outclass his rival's birds at the time of the show and the market poultry man wishes to produce more money than he can expend on his prime quality to secure the top prices for his product.

It is the duty of the poultryman to make out of the regular season as vigorous and thrifty condition as those made out of the regular season.

Generally some objective is the in mind when the poultryman starts the season. It may be some special sale at the end of the year or a group of birds to be sold to supply winners for customers or perhaps to furnish early broilers or soft roasters or to get eggs early at the season when prices are high and in consequence the season is a big money maker.

There are many reasons why it is necessary to plan a sufficient time ahead to be sure of accomplishing what is wanted, but the most important is that it will allow some allowance for shrinkage or failure on the hoped-for results.

Seasons were all identical one could plan to get the same results with the same treatment year after year, but conditions vary so that, if the season is materially affected by any deviation from the regular season, the results of early chicks will not be as marked as those of late chicks.

Before starting the season's hatching, which is usually the big factor in the year's work, the condition of the brooders must be the closest consideration. Here is involved the task of having the breeder in the pink of condition when the hatching eggs are to be secured.

The best eggs for this purpose are those from the best hens when they are in the best physical condition. If they are run down from too much showing or from forcing for egg production they will not become physically fit until well on in the season.

The Sunshine and Inverlea Picnic, June 30

Have all of you heard of the picnic, 'Twist Sunshine and Inverlea? If not, would you care to listen To the little tale from me?

I know I'm a poor story teller— Don't exaggerate in the least When I say that there were hundreds Assembled at the feast.

Yes, you're sure to say, "the fiber!" So I'll hasten to relate, That "no-quesions" are usually thicker Before it begins to rain.

When first we started picnicking There was not a cloud in the sky; The cool lake was calm and peaceful And so pleasing to the eye.

We ate ice-cream and candies—yum!! Till it almost made us sick. Bet you a nickel you wished you'd 'a come

To our coolie pic-a-nic!

But soon the rain came down in showers, The two lakes began to foam; And a "certain lady," speaking, Must needs a ride to get home.

So a democratic lot of people Then take a different branch, Disregarded their trail, and took her To her home at Shorty's ranch.

The rain ceased, Mr. Nier seemed bright As he wired us to come to a dance that night, And, "come we knew by the groan on the wire, That the man on the phone was Shorty Nier."

We went, and had the greatest fun, And surely had to laugh, When a German apple toppled down A man in the photograph.

(P.S.—That apple was rotten.) As we all were very tired; At two a.m. we thought 'twas fair To tend our journey homewards, Though our hearts weren't there—L.C.
